

Volunteer for conservation research!

I am a PhD candidate at UWA looking for a volunteer to join me on a field trip out to the Great Western Woodlands from 23rd March till 7th April 2014 (some flexibility on dates possible).

We will maintain transects of motion-sensor cameras to monitor cat, fox and dingo activity, and look at road effects on landscape water movement. This is part of a wider study that is examining regional ecological impacts of mining and exploration in the region.

Volunteers need to have experience driving in remote areas and be ready to do a lot of walking. They will complete a 2-day 4WD course and UWA vehicle safety induction, as well as provide their own camping gear and share the cooking and cleaning etc.

Please contact Keren Raiter on 0401 681 752 or keren.raiter@grs.uwa.edu.au to express your interest

This is an excellent opportunity to visit this beautiful, and little-known part of Australia.

More info on this research is available at sustainingecology.com/research.

